

Assessment check before the November 15 appeal deadline

Providence property owners have until November 15, 2026 to appeal this year's assessment with the Tax Assessor (R.I. Gen. Laws § 44-5-26, as amended).

WHAT YOU GET, PER PARCEL, IN TWO BUSINESS DAYS

- The eight nearest similar properties (same use, unit count, size within 30%, built within 25 years) with their assessments per square foot, and where the subject falls among them.
- The nearest 2024–2025 sales of similar size, with each sale's price per square foot and its assessment-to-price ratio.
- The citywide assessment-to-sale ratio for the property class, from every qualifying 2024–2025 sale.
- A plain finding: how far above or below its neighbors the parcel is assessed, on the more conservative of two comparisons, and when the comparables don't support an appeal.

PORTFOLIO SCAN

For an owner or manager with many Providence parcels: every parcel run the same way and ranked by how far it sits above its neighbors, so the appeals worth filing are obvious.

BUILT ON

The City's 2025 tax roll joined parcel by parcel to the Tax Assessor's CAMA file, the same join behind my published counts of Providence's rental housing and tax-exempt property. In a sample of 139 LLC-owned houses and 2–5 family buildings, about one in eleven was assessed 15 percent or more above its nearest similar neighbors.

PRICE

One parcel	$150
Portfolio scan, up to 25 parcels	$750
Attorneys: per-case reports on request	by quote

Evidence for an appeal, not legal advice. A sample report (21 Leah St) is attached.